

Vacancy for National Principal – Auckland Campus

Laidlaw College (formerly Bible College of New Zealand), New Zealand's premier theological tertiary institution, is two years out from a major rebrand and several years into a renewed vision of the purpose and place of theological education globally. Following significant renewal in our course offerings and structure, the College is ready to transition to the next stage of its vision. The appointment of a new principal is a key step in the College's vision and strategy to intentionally train people of influence for vocations in both Church and society.

We are seeking a National Principal who will lead the College in fulfilling its mission of equipping students and scholars to renew their communities with a faith as intelligent as it is courageous.

Gifted in team leadership, you collaborate with others to bring out their best. Students will be inspired by your ability to model an authentic integration of faith and life and be captured by the scope and richness of your vision for theological education. You are skilled at implementing vision, developing and executing strategy, managing resources, and also providing stability. Your relational style invites active participation, and inspires confidence and enthusiasm among stakeholders. You are able to maintain strong links with government agencies and other institutions and forge new links with Maori and Pasifika communities. Your faith is authentically lived, Christ-centred and broadly evangelical. In articulating your own theological foundations, you are comfortable engaging across a broad spectrum of faith communities. You live a vibrant life that enjoys art, sport, popular culture, and relaxing with family and friends. You have a balanced sense of self in relationship to others.

We are open to candidates of unusual backgrounds. If you believe you possess the key attributes but lack the perceived experience, we would like to hear from you.
